A QUICK GUIDE to Presenting Content in Virtual Classrooms: A Continuum of Options

Presented by Diana Straut dstraut@measinc.com

Goals of this Quick Guide

- Share strategies for maximizing time and teacher presence in teaching in virtual settings.
- Offer a continuum of lo-tech or no tech options for teaching content and engaging students in person or remotely.

Think about your daily class schedule in a 'normal' school year...

How is time divided or allocated?

What percentage of instructional time are you present (F2F contact) with students?

Virtual teaching forces us to RETHINK

- ★ The allocation of time
- ★ Teacher presence in the learning process

Research on Teacher Presence:

Labeled for Commercial Use with Modifications

(decreasing levels of teacher presence, increasing levels of student autonomy)

Teacher Centered

- Large or small group
- Lecture, guided practice, modeling:( eg: Explicit Instruction, GRR)

Flipped:

- Traditional lecture and HW/guided practice are reversed.

- Two or more students,
- Structured collaboration,
- Learn something or complete a task

- Real world, meaningful and complex questions;
- Hands-on, challenging authentic tasks;
- Extended period of time;

Student Centered

- Choice boards and tiered assignments;
- Activity packets/ "seat work" but students 'drive.' Not busy work

Direct
Instruction or Flipped
Classroom

Direct
Instruction

WHEN IS IT APPROPRIATE ONLINE?

- New content
- Large/lengthy amounts of content
- Models or demonstrations
- Building Community
- SEL-controversial or sensitive content

Direct
Instruction

WHAT ARE EFFECTIVE WAYS TO DELIVER IT?

- Micro Lectures/chunked content
- Visuals
- Bullet points
- Annotated Slides (need to know v nice to know)
- Storyboarding
- Listening/viewing Guides

Small Group
or Peer-to-Peer

WHEN IS IT APPROPRIATE ONLINE?

- subgoals (eg: socialization, collaboration, communication)
- practice or application of content and HOTS (eg: Debate a topic, create a product...)
- exploration of text (collaborative strategic reading)
- quiz or test prep

Small Group
or Peer-to-Peer

WHAT ARE SOME EFFECTIVE WAYS TO STRUCTURE IT?

- Peer Tutor Scripts, Reference Cards, Cue Cards
- Use of paras/complementary special area teachers
- lo tech: International pen pals (see resource sheet)

Inquiry
or Project-based learning

WHEN IS IT APPROPRIATE ONLINE?

- Deep Investigation
- Develop inquiry skills
- Synthesize several skills or content areas
- Promote independent learning
- Increase motivation through for choice/control/autonomy

Inquiry
or Project-based learning

WHAT ARE SOME EFFECTIVE WAYS TO STRUCTURE IT?

- Start with an existing project
  - yours/original
  - from on-line resource
  - something you're passionate about
- Start with just a slice
- Structure/scaffold with digital touchpoints

THE WORKSHEET CONTINUUM

BUSYSHEET

keeps kids busy but has little educational value

POWERSHEET

directly supports learning:
may support other tasks

word searches
word scrambles
irrelevant coloring,
cutting & pasting

recall questions
comprehension questions
labeling stuff

skills practice (only as needed and not for a grade)

graphic organizers
note-taking templates data collection tools planning sheets

Key Takeaways

Content needs to be prioritized, chunked and slowed down.

Plan for a variety of delivery methods that

- ★ strike a balance between ‘digital interaction’ and meaningful ‘off line’ independent learning.
- ★ offer flexible timing and plan experiences that span multiple days.
- ★ vary teacher presence and promote student independence, choice and autonomy.
